Closing Remarks by Dr. Man-Gon Park, Director General & CEO, CPSC, 10 May 2005

We have now come to the concluding part of this Regional Workshop. Today is our last day, and we hope that the days that passed have been productive and meaningful for all of you.

My dear colleagues and participants, our collaboration with ADBI, through the very good support and trust by Dr. JK Lee, has likewise been very meaningful to us at CPSC.

We have been conducting various programs in many member countries, but we feel we are giving value added benefit as we are giving service to both CPSC and ADBI member countries. These services are basically attuned to our strategies of advancing Information and Communication Technology to foster social and economic development.

This opportunity has been very significant to us. We are very thankful to Dr. Lee for his trust and confidence in us.

Likewise, we are very thankful to all our Participants, Resource Speakers and Observers for the very good sharing and facilitation of discussions related to managing sustainable e-community centers or kiosks.

We all recognize that something excellent and significant has come out of this workshop.

We extend our deep appreciation to all country delegates for your contribution and efforts in working in such a limited time.

We all hope that your plans for building sustainable e-community centers will be successful.

May we also thank each one of you for going by our workshop arrangements, for giving us necessary feedback to improve in some aspects of this workshop and for appreciating our efforts in making your stay here in Agra convenient and conducive to learn and interact with other delegates.

CPSC looks forward to another opportunity to support ADBI in this kind of valuable program.

On behalf of CPSC and ADBI, we congratulate all our participants. We hope that the proposals you made would shape a project noteworthy of ADBI support and funding.

CPSC would continue collaborating with all international agencies, specifically ADBI, in engaging countries to utilize technology in all their national development efforts.

I wish you all a safe trip back home.

Thank you very much!
